

IELTS LISTENING – Four business values
S22T4

IELTS listening Four business values listening practice test has 10 questions belongs to the Leisure & Entertainment subject.

In public discussion of business, we take certain values for granted. Today I'm going to talk about four of them: collaboration. hard work, creativity, and excellence. Most people would say they're all 'good things'.

I'm going to suggest that's an over-simple view. The trouble with these values is that they're theoretical concepts, removed from the reality of day-to-day business.

Questions 31-40

Complete the notes below.

Type ONE WORD ONLY for each answer.

Ocean Biodiversity

Biodiversity hotspots

• areas containing many different species

• important for locating targets for 31

• at first only identified on land

Boris Worm, 2005

• identified hotspots for large ocean predators, e.g. sharks

• found that ocean hotspots:

• were not always rich in 32

• had higher temperatures at the 33

• had sufficient 34 in the water

Q₃₁ Pursue values by all means, but be prepared for what may happen as a result. They can actually cause damage, which is not at all the intention.

Business leaders generally try to do the right thing. But Q₃₂ all too often the right thing backfires, if those leaders adopt values without understanding and managing the side effects that arise. The values can easily get in the way of what's actually intended. OK. So the first value I'm going to discuss is Er, let me give you an example. Q₃₃ On a management training course I once attended, we were put into groups and had to construct a bridge across a stream. using building blocks that we were given. The rule was that everyone in the team had to move at least one building block during the construction. This was intended to encourage teamwork. But it was really a job best done by one person. Q₃₄ The other teams tried to collaborate on building the structure, and descended into confusion, with everyone getting in each other's way. Our team leader solved the challenge brilliantly. She simply asked everyone in the team to move a piece a few centimeters, to comply with the rule, and then let the person in the team with an aptitude for puzzles like this build it alone. We finished before any other team. My point is that the task wasn't really suited to team working, so why make it one?

Lisa Ballance, 2007

• looked for hotspots for marine 35

• found these were all located where ocean currents meet

Census of Marine Life

• found new ocean species living:

- under the 36

- near volcanoes on the ocean floor

Global Marine Species Assessment

• want to list endangered ocean species, considering:

- population size

- geographical distribution

- rate of 37

• Aim: to assess 20,000 species and make a distribution 38 for each one

Teamwork can also lead to inconsistency – a common cause of poor sales. Q₃₅ In the case of a smartphone that a certain company launched, one director wanted to target the business market, and another demanded it was aimed at consumers. The company wanted both directors to be involved, so gave the product a consumer-friendly name, but marketed it to companies. The result was that it met the needs of neither group. It would have been better to let one director or the other have his way, not both. Now industriousness or hard work. It's easy to mock people who say they work hard: after all, a hamster running around in a wheel is working hard – and getting nowhere. Of course, Q₃₆ hard work is valuable, but only when properly targeted. Otherwise, it wastes the resources that companies value most – time and energy. And that's bad for the organisation. There's a management model that groups people according to four criteria: clever, hard-working, stupid and lazy. Q₃₇ Here 'lazy' means having a rational determination not to carry out unnecessary tasks. It doesn't mean trying to avoid work altogether. Most people display two of these characteristics, and the most valuable people are those who are both clever and lazy: they possess intellectual clarity, and they don't rush into making decisions. They come up with solutions to save the time and energy spent by the stupid and hard-working group. Instead of throwing more man-hours at a problem, the clever and lazy group looks for a more effective solution.

Next we come to creativity. This often works well – creating an attention-grabbing TV commercial, for example, might lead to increased sales. But it isn't always a good thing. Some advertising campaigns are remembered for their creativity, without having any effect on sales. Q₃₈ This happened a few years ago with the launch of a chocolate bar: subsequent research showed that plenty of consumers remembered the adverts, but had no idea what was being advertised. The trouble is that the creator derives pleasure from coming up with the idea, and wrongly assumes the audience for the campaign will share that feeling. A company that brings out thousands of new products may seem more creative than a company that only has a few, but it may be too creative, and make smaller profits.

Recommendations to retain ocean biodiversity

• &increase the number of ocean reserves

• establish 39 corridors (e.g. for turtles)

• reduce fishing quotas

• catch fish only for the purpose of 40

Q₃₉ Creativity needs to be targeted, to solve a problem that the company has identified. Just coming up with more and more novel products isn't necessarily a good thing. And finally, excellence. We all know companies that claim they 'strive for excellence', but it takes a long time to achieve excellence. In business, being first with a product is more profitable than having the best product. A major study of company performance compared pioneers – that is, companies bringing out the first version of a particular product – with followers, the companies that copied and improved on that product. Q₄₀ The study found that the pioneers commanded an average market share of 29 percent, while the followers achieved less than half that, only 13 percent – even though their product might have been better. Insisting on excellence in everything we do is time-consuming, wastes energy, and leads to losing out on opportunities. Sometimes, second-rate work is more worthwhile than excellence. 'Make sure it's excellent' sound like a good approach to business, but the 'just get-started' approach is likely to be more successful.
