whether far afield or close to home, and for us to showcase your work online. The winner of each month's competition will also see their shot mounted and displayed in the end-of-year exhibition for the public at The Guardian's offices in London. Q2 Once the exhibition is finished, each monthly winner will receive a framed copy of their shot to place with pride on their own wall.

Q3 The end-of-year exhibition in London is free for the public to attend. NOT GIVEN

There will be a different theme for each month. Q4 Members of The Guardian travel writing team, and photographer Michael Ryan of Fotovue.com will judge the monthly entries and the overall winner.

To enter you must be living in the UK from the time you submit your entry into the competition to the time you are selected as a winner. The competition is open to all photographers (both amateur and professional).

Q5 The overall winner (chosen from the 12 monthly winners) will go on an amazing fournight trip to Swedish Lapland. The host for this specialist holiday is Fredrik Broman, who has been a nature photographer for 21 years. Fredrik will assist the winner and other participants in photographing a wide variety of winter subjects. Q6 Each day has a specific focus. The trip includes winter light photography workshops, an image editing workshop, a night photography course, and an action photography workshop.

Included in the prize: return flights from the UK, four nights' accommodation with full board, Q7 cold weather clothing for the duration of the trip – thermal overalls, winter boots, gloves, hats and woollen socks – fully qualified wilderness guides, and instructors.

The overall winner will be required to write a report of the trip, and take accompanying photographs, which will be printed in the Travel section of The Guardian at a later date. Q8 The Guardian reserves the right, however, to modify your report and photos as necessary. Your name will of course appear with the article and photos.
